Rocket Science XOSIZE Hire Wetsuit (Based off Rocket Science Real Joe & Jane Wetsuits)

Rocket Science Sports has made significant technological improvements for function and comfort. The Real Jane and Joe wetsuits start with comfort. They feature a low seamless neckline for comfort in a critical location. RSS varied the Yamamoto 38 neoprene thicknesses, to give maximum flexibility and maximum buoyancy where needed most. To improve buoyancy and increase flexibility, RSS has implemented a new Buoyancy Laminated Technology (BLT™).

Buoyancy Laminated Technology (BLT™). Translation...

- * Lighter weight
- * Greater buoyancy
- * Faster swim times

The BLT™ utilizes various densities of neoprene rubber resulting in the most lightweight and flexible material used in triathlon wetsuit. The material is approximately 30% to 50% lighter than most of the neoprene on the market today, creating a phenomenal competitive advantage.

Please read below for frequently asked questions.

Why not buy?

If you are pleased with your wetsuit you can purchase it at the end of the hire period, or of course look at one of our many other suits in stock!

Why should I use a Tri Specific Wetsuit?

A triathlon wetsuit is designed for swimming. The flexibility around the arms is incredible and will not impede your swimming. A triathlon wetsuit also fits extremely closely! Novice's initial reaction when putting on their wetsuit is that it is too tight on the chest. Any tightness (to a degree) will immediately disappear as soon as you enter the water. If the wetsuit is too comfortable on land than chances are the suit is too big for you and will scoop up water when you start to swim. Practicing in a wetsuit in the weeks prior to the race is very important and will allay any fears you may have. Hiring a wetsuit in advance of the event will allow you time to practice in it.

Top tips for putting it on!

Put on when you are dry, Nails should be cut & not sharp, Remove watches and / or Jewellery.

Use plastic bags over the feet (or keep your socks on), and hands to help when putting on the suit (This aids for the hands and feet to slip through a lot easier).

Avoid nail contact with the outer Neoprene surface – use finger tips! Pull legs on first as far as you can, then proceed to pull on the upper body of the suit. Triathlon specific wetsuits are different from water-skiing, Surfing, Scuba or rafting wetsuits. They are fragile race equipment and require careful use.

The suits are made to be put on slowly – taking enough time to get the suit on correctly. Take care not to “chip” or snag the surface of the suit with your fingernails. Race wetsuits are made to take off quickly when done correctly. A lubricant such as Bodyglide is recommended to eliminate chafing / rubbing (NEVER use Vaseline or Petroleum based products as this will eat into the suit's joins)

What to wear under your wetsuit?

You should wear under your wetsuit whatever you will complete the rest of the race in. Remember nudity in the transition area will result in disqualification! You can race in any clothing YOU feel comfortable in, and most will wear cycling shorts or swim costume which they will keep on for the duration of the race. Everything will dry very quickly when you start to cycle. You can also keep your race top by your bike in transition to put on before the cycle. TRISUITS are designed specifically for swimming, biking and running. They dry quickly, provide sufficient padding and will prevent chafing in certain areas.

What size am I?

All manufacturers work with a height and weight chart, the most important field to get right is the weight; your height is the last step to go by. I.e. a heavy person cannot wear a wetsuit that isn't wide enough, but can wear one with a little extra length in it (usually as weight increases within a size chart so too does length of the suits).

People need to be accurate and honest with their sizing!

Can I change my size once I have hired the wetsuit?

If you discover that your wetsuit is not the right size for you then please contact us to re-arrange a new size. You are responsible for all delivery costs that result in this process. Points to be aware of:

- 1) Everyone that is not used to triathlon wetsuits will find them uncomfortably tight when putting them on! They are not like other wetsuits.
- 2) The wetsuits will give a little once in the water.
